Seniors,

You chose your classes for a reason. You are preparing yourself for life after graduation.

But it won’t cost you your education.

This pandemic has cost you so much!

You have a right to earn credits you signed up for.

Your counselor should work with you and offer free options to finish your classes.

Although a credit waiver is an option, it could have long-term consequences.

A waiver could impact your future opportunities:

- Making up waived credits could cost extra money at your next school.
- Transfer or admission to an out-of-state program could be complicated.
- Eligibility for higher-paying jobs may be more difficult.

Talk to your teachers and counselor to review all of your options beyond the waiver.

You have the right to make sure you graduate fully prepared for your next step.

And go get your dreams!
CLASS OF 2020, your senior year has been deeply interrupted by the COVID-19 pandemic. From financial insecurity to loss of graduation ceremonies, you have sacrificed so much.

You have big dreams, and your education and future plans should not be compromised. Take advantage of learning now so you can transition successfully into what's next. And learn about your options regarding graduation requirements and what they mean for your post-high school plans.

High school seniors who were on track to graduate and were impacted by COVID-19 school building closures may have certain credit requirements waived if they are not able to earn those credits this spring. Before accepting a waiver, it is important to first know what it could mean for your future plans.

ACCEPTING A WAIVER COULD HAVE LONG-TERM CONSEQUENCES.
- You may need to make up the content in college or as part of other post-high school training.
- It may impact your preparation for some majors, such as nursing, engineering, and other STEM fields.
- It may impact admission and transfer opportunities to out-of-state programs and professional schools, as well as employment eligibility.

School districts and teachers are making their best efforts to provide education. You have the right to keep learning and stay on track for your future. A waiver is a detour and should be a last resort, and you can decline it. Take some time to think about what a waiver would mean for your future and ensure you will be best positioned to transition to your post-high school plans.
